Source: Issue One analysis of data from the Center for Responsive Politics and the Federal Election Commission. See Appendix 1.2 for more details.
Methodology:

Unless otherwise noted, all figures are from the Center for Responsive Politics. Issue One analyzed trends related to fundraising for the highest-ranking Democrat and Republican on each A committee, including money raised from top industry supporters and contributions made to other House candidates and the arms of the Democratic and Republican parties focused on aiding House candidates.

The specific sector shown above represents this member of Congress’ top financial backer between January 2009 and December 2016, according to the Center for Responsive Politics. The percentage raised from each sector was calculated by dividing the sector-specific fundraising figure by the total fundraising figure. The percentage transferred to the DCCC or NRCC was calculated by dividing the amount transferred by the total fundraising figure.

The additional leadership PAC giving reflects the combined sum of a lawmaker’s leadership PAC transfers to the party’s House-focused arm, plus leadership PAC funds given directly to other House candidates as identified by the Center for Responsive Politics. This does not include certain other leadership PAC contributions, such as money given to joint fundraising committees, state parties or non-House candidates.

* Transfers to the DCCC and NRCC displayed by the Center for Responsive Politics were cross-referenced against primary source documents on the website of the Federal Election Commission. In cases of discrepancies, which are denoted by an asterisk, Issue One used figures from FEC filings after consulting with the Center for Responsive Politics.

The combined financial aid to other House candidates and the party’s House-focused arm was calculated by adding the campaign-to-party transfer amount to the additional leadership PAC giving amount. This analysis does not include the unknown amount of money for which a member of Congress is credited by the party for directly raising for the DCCC or NRCC.
